Fact sheet

Sime Darby and land grabs in Liberia

The case

Malaysia-based Sime Darby, one of the world's largest producers of palm oil is developing palm oil plantations in Liberia, swallowing up farmlands and forests used by local communities to sustain their livelihoods.

The contracts for land concessions signed by Sime Darby and the Liberian Government violate several Human Rights principles in conventions ratified by the Liberian Government as well as principles enshrined in Liberian Law. Affected communities and civil society have organised to demand from the company and Liberian Government that communities' rights are recognized and contracts between Sime Darby and the Government are renegotiated.

What is Sime Darby doing in Liberia?

- On July 23, 2009 Sime Darby signed a 63-year lease agreement with the government of Liberia, for 311,187 hectares (about 760000 acres) of land which is referred to as the Gross Concession Area.
- The government agreed to allocate land 'free of encumbrances' to Sime Darby, with the understanding that the company would cultivate 220,000 hectares within twenty years of signing the agreement.
- The company agreed that it would pay US$5 per hectare per year for land it cultivates for oil palm and provide employment for more than 30,000 Liberians.
- In 2010, Sime Darby started operations in western Liberia, cultivating land to set up an oil palm nursery.
- In 2011 the company began planting its first oil palm plantation, in Garwula District, Grand Cape Mount County.

How have local communities been affected by Sime Darby's activities in Liberia?

In August 2012, friends of the Earth Liberia published a report on the impacts of Sime Darby on the livelihoods of communities in Garwula District.¹ The main findings of the report are:

- Farms and farmlands which provide livelihoods and food for the local communities are being swallowed up by the Sime Darby plantation, with very few alternative livelihood options available to those not incorporated into the company workforce.
- At the time of writing no compensation had been paid for land taken over by the company. The only compensation they had received was for crops that had been destroyed and the amount paid was grossly inadequate.
- Forest areas used for various cultural practices had also been destroyed and planted with oil palm.

How will the environment be affected by Sime Darby's activities in Liberia?

According to Sime Darby's own High Conservation Value Assessment report, one of the concession areas (Garwula District, Grand Cape Mount County) is comprised of wetlands, agricultural lands, and mainly intact natural forested areas. It houses a variety of animal species including Water Chevrotain and African Buffalo, both of which are protected under Liberian laws. Various species of forest and lowland birds, as well as reptiles including crocodiles are found in the area. Another concession area (Bopolu District, Gbarpolu County) also has significant forest cover, including large blocks of primary and secondary forests.ⁱⁱ While Sime Darby has promised to avoid High Conservation Value forests, it is difficult to see how they can move into these concession areas without the deforestation of primary and secondary forests.

What do local communities demand from the company and Liberian Government?

In a declaration released in November 2012, more than 150 representatives of communities affected by Sime Darby's palm oil plantations stated that:ⁱⁱⁱ

- No consultation took place before their land was taken over by Sime Darby
- Communities did not give their consent to giving away the land to Sime Darby
- What happened in Garwula District cannot happen in other parts of the country

The communities specifically demand from Sime Darby:

- Only after the communities have given their Free, Prior and Informed Consent can the company operate on their land;
- Communities should not be displaced by the activities of Sime Darby;
- All community members should benefit from the plantations and the benefits shall be laid out clearly to the communities before they enter into any agreement;
- Employment rights must be respected;
- Compensation rates must be agreed with the communities before entering into any contractual agreement.

During the conference a significant number of attendees stated their unequivocal opposition to Sime Darby's presence in their community lands.

How does Sime Darby violate human rights?

An analysis of the contract between Sime Darby and the Liberian Government^{iv} reveals that it violates several aspects of internationally recognised human rights. Liberia is a signatory of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR), the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (ICESCR), and the International Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Racial Discrimination (ICERD) as well as a number of other human rights agreements. The contracts violate provisions in all these conventions. For example:

- By having no protection for communities' rights in respect of customary land and natural resources
- By not guaranteeing the principle of Free, Prior and Informed Consent (FPIC)
- By allowing involuntary resettlement of communities if they are deemed to impede the companies' activities

- By allowing the degradation of food security by not mandating that the company find alternative nutrition sources for community members who lose farmland to the plantations

Local communities accuse Sime Darby of violating especially the FPIC process by:

- Providing inadequate information about the concession areas
- Not providing communities copies of the concession agreement
- Misleading them about what benefits they can expect if they are not hired
- Giving little or no time to consider their response
- Providing inadequate or no compensation
- By not giving communities the opportunity to say 'no'^v

Liberia is especially vulnerable to land clashes due to its history of recent conflict. A UN Panel of experts on Liberia investigating peace, development and security in the country recommended a moratorium on further land leases pending completion of the land tenure clarification process. Therefore leases also disregard the recommendations of this UN Panel.^{vi} The most recent panel report referred to concerns about the implementation of another oil palm plantation, in Sinoe County.

According to the Government, 81% of the population in Liberia is either highly vulnerable or moderately vulnerable to food insecurity; already a large proportion of the population is unable to enjoy the Right to Food. The plantations are having a further detrimental effect on local food security^{vii}.

Violating international guidelines for multinational corporations

Sime Darby has also violated several international guidelines:

- The Roundtable on Sustainable Palm Oil - Communities filed a complaint in 2011 at the RSPO claiming that their rights had been infringed as Sime Darby operated on their customary land without their Free, Prior and Informed Consent (FPIC). As a result there are ongoing negotiations between the affected communities and Sime Darby. However the RSPO is a voluntary initiative and negotiations within it will not address the fundamental problems in the contracts that leave the communities vulnerable to abuses in the future. Sime Darby is a founding member of the RSPO.
- The UN Global Compacts principles - These mandate companies to respect and protect Human Rights independently of State's obligations.^{viii} Sime Darby is a signatory of the Global Compact.
- Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises - They similarly state that "[r]espect for human rights is the global standard of expected conduct for enterprises independently of States' abilities and/or willingness to fulfil their human rights obligations, and does not diminish those obligations".^{ix}

About Sime Darby

- Sime Darby Plantation is the agri-business division of the Sime Darby Group, a Malaysian industrial conglomerate, and is one of the world's largest palm oil producers with an annual output of 2.4 million tons or 6% of world's crude palm oil output annually.

About Friends of the Earth

- Friends of the Earth Liberia, also known as the The Sustainable Development Institute (SDI) is a social and environmental justice organisation that works with local communities on a range of issues, including natural resource governance and management, the environment, state and corporate social responsibility with regards to resource exploitation, and economic and social justice for rural populations.
- In 2006, SDI Director Silas Kpanan'AYoung Siakor won the Goldman Prize for his work in exposing illegal logging in Liberia.
- SDI is a member of Friends of the Earth International, which is world's largest grassroots environmental justice network, uniting 74 national member groups worldwide – see www.foei.org
